It has been working great, but now the layout is extending outside the container. The jquery-pipeline plugin should be executed last, so I have done it this way: javascript $(function () { var plugin = $.fn.pipeline; $('#button').click(function () { if ($('#box').is(':hidden')) { $('#box').slideDown('slow'); return; } plugin.start('.box', 'outside'); $('#box').slideDown('slow'); }); }); The html is: ... click me How do I pass a flag to the jquery-pipeline plugin? (I would like to prevent the sliding effect when the button is clicked if the box is shown already. Once I pass a parameter to the plugin, I can check it in the plugin function) A: The jquery-pipeline plugin has an option to reset after the animation if you would like to do that: $('#button').click(function() { if (!$('#box').is(':hidden')) { $('#button').html("click me
